

Blue curves are distributions of the differences between measurements from zero-heat-flux sensors and core temperature measurements in individual studies. The red curve is the distribution of the pooled estimate.